Ordering Physician:

Stewart, Carol M, CRNP

Reason for exam:

positive TB skin test

FINDINGS

GONG, ZHENG

CHEST X-RAY

HISTORY: Positive TB skin test.

The two views of the chest are of satisfactory quality. The patient shows some minimal density in the left upper lung involving the apical portion of the left upper lung medially. This density may represent an active process and further evaluation with CT is therefore recommended. The lungs are otherwise well expanded and clear. The heart and mediastinal structures are normal.

1. There is abnormal density in the medial aspect of the left lung apex. This could be an active infiltrate such as occurs with primary tuberculosis or it could represent another lesion. Further evaluation with CT recommended.

2. No other abnormality is seen.
